“I adore wearing gems, but not because they are mine. You can't possess radiance, you can only admire it.”

Young starlets

Star style can be delicate, too. The marquis set diamond necklace from Travel Jewelry makes a lovely gift from the parents of the bride. The 16-inch necklace lies gently on the hollow of the throat. Star drops sparkle all the way around. The look is young, fresh and timeless. Plus, it's perfect when paired with simple diamond earrings from the groom.

— THE LEGENDARY ELIZABETH TAYLOR

Something blue

The oh-so-popular colored stone is actually an ode to the ring's roots. Sapphires are the traditional center of European engagement rings. Sapphires are found in blue, pink, yellow and red. The gems are almost as hard as diamonds, but easier on the bankbook. Many brides are opting for a big blue stone over a little white diamond.

Elements of style

With so many gorgeous options, what's the best piece for your gown? It's all about balance and proportion. A choker shows well with a bateau or jewel neckline. A multiple-strand collar style flatters a plunging bodice. With a strapless gown, the 16-inch princess necklace lays perfectly on the clavicle. Longer single strands compliment high necklines.

Something old, something new

The sleeker the gown, the more room for an extraordinary piece of jewelry. A vintage-inspired brooch good enough for Liz Taylor, Lana Turner or Claudette Colbert, transforms a silk sheath into a glamorous gown. This swirling Art Deco pin from Pampillonia makes a statement. Adorn a plain bodice or pin up a chignon with screen siren style.
